Of an estimated 8 million people at high risk for lung cancer, only 5.7% underwent a low-dose CT screening in 2019 to help diagnose the disease. These numbers present a significant challenge that health care providers have in addressing this 'silent killer.'

Lung cancer has one of the lowest five-year survival rates because cases are often diagnosed at later stages, when the disease is less likely to be curable. People of color face worse outcomes, being even less likely to be diagnosed early and less likely to receive treatment.

The [American Lung Association's] 'State of Lung Cancer 2020' highlights that too many people are being left behind when it comes to making progress against lung cancer. To turn the tide against this deadly disease, Congress needs to protect and expand access to quality and affordable healthcare that helps more people who may be at high risk get screened and ensures that those diagnosed have access to treatment.

Payment and access both serve as significant barriers to greater use of low-dose CT as a screening tool. But your employer has taken measures to make important diagnostic medical imaging easy and affordable for you.

Your employer offers you the incredible benefit of high-quality, lower cost medical imaging by partnering with Green Imaging. If your physician has ordered a diagnostic imaging screening, our vast network of freestanding facilities makes these exams very accessible. And by using your employer's Green Imaging benefit, you'll pay much, much less out of pocket.

When you need an imaging exam, we're here.
